PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Last May we announced this extra September meeting, and introduced the chairmen of our various committees. We also issued an invitation to participate by volunteering to serve on any one or more of these committees.

As you know ASHRAE is a volunteer organization dedicated to research and technical advancement in heating, air conditioning and refrigeration. It is one of the largest technical organizations in the world, having some 45,000 members of which 4,500 are Canadian. Each member is fully aware of the benefits of receiving the updated versions of the ASHRAE Guide, and the monthly issue of the Journal.

Like any other such organization, it requires volunteers at the local chapter level to handle the business aspect of the organization as well as providing for the technical input at the regular meetings. This year, under the chairmanship of Bruce Findlay, we are promoting a rejuvenated technical committee which promises to bring us some interesting surprises during our future meetings. Hopefully this will permit those of you who have been reluctant to join committees to actively participate in these programs. Society members who do not support their local chapter actually are depriving our chapter members of the benefits of their experience. To reflect on an old cliché that; "You get out of something what you put in", this is never more true than with a volunteer organization.

Make a note on your calendar now to attend this first meeting of this new season. Then go a step further and mark the third Tuesday of each month (except December) for ASHRAE meetings. Just as you need ASHRAE, ASHRAE needs you. Establish your priority for ASHRAE this year, and where possible, reschedule the other functions, you will not regret it.
